

ABSTRACT

A method for designing a mask and for fabricating a panel improves the efficiency with which a base substrate may be used by forming unit panels of different sizes on the base substrate. The mask includes a first region and a second region, a first mask pattern within the first region, and a second mask pattern within the second region.